Serafin String Quartet Welcomes New Violist Sheila Browne

(Wilmington, Del.) July 28, 2016 – Serafin String Quartet (SSQ) welcomes new violist Sheila Browne effective immediately. Browne replaces Esme Allen-Creighton who steps down after four years as violist with SSQ to pursue a degree in music therapy.

Sheila Browne has also been named the new viola professor at University of Delaware's Department of Music. Brown joins both the University and the Quartet from her position at University of North Carolina School of the Arts, where she has been on the faculty for ten years.

Hailed by The New York Times as a "stylish player," Browne is an accomplished soloist, chamber musician, professor and orchestral principal. She received a Naumburg scholarship and a Bachelor of Music degree at the Juilliard School, where she was famed pedagogue Karen Tuttle's teaching assistant for four years.
